The unique positioning and impactful aspects that make a student's qualities stand out in admission.

A required skill needed to clearly communicate student's personal brand in university application and to excel in higher education.

Analyzing overall grades, course rigor at school and the required standardized tests to match with the targeted universities' level of competitiveness.

Exploration is essential to identify what to pursue in the future and, therefore, allows student to choose the right major while developing his/her CV at the same time.

Note:

Our Assessment & Recommendation will be categorized based on these aspects

INITIAL ASSESSMENT REPORT

OVERALL ASSESSMENT

#TakeOnYourFuture #ItsALLinThePrep

CURRENT STANDING

Exploration

You have not really decided on your major. However, you have looked at majoring in Computer Science, Business, and Information Systems, and are still considering the pros and cons of each one. Since your profile at this time is highly business-oriented, it's a good time to strategize and decide on a major before continuing to build your profile.

Besides your academic interest, you seem to have an interest in community service (education in entrepreneurship), painting, and writing. There is a lot you can do to scale these up to make them part of your brand, if that's what you would like.

Personal Brand

Your personal brand is currently 'Renaissance woman with a passion for entrepreneurship and community service'. This means that you have been able to focus on some of your varied interests to create a cohesive brand for yourself. However, it is important to think about whether this brand will be right for your intended major. You may have to tweak it or change it drastically once you decide on a major.

Academic Performance

Overall, you have an average grade of 6, which means you are performing well academically. You have participated in several academic-based competitions and achieved silver/bronze. Keep it up!

AREAS OF IMPROVEMENT

Passion/Interest Exploration & Personal Brand

You have started exploring and focusing on your interests. This is a good start, but narrowing down your activities to higher-impact projects related to your areas of interest will give you the leg up you need to become a competitive applicant.

You need to start exploring potential career paths related to these areas by networking with professionals, working on and scaling up your personal projects to build your profile, taking online courses to develop your skills, and doing internships to gain professional experience.

You should also start exploring your hobbies and personal interests to see which one you'd like to commit to. Showing commitment in a personal interest on top of your academic interest will help add dimension to your Personal Brand.

Academic

To further strengthen your academic profile, you should consider joining (and excelling in) both national and international level academic competitions related to Math, Business, and Programming.

Summary:

You have explored your interests and are deciding between majoring in Computer Science, Business, Information Systems, or other majors that might help you achieve your goals. Your personal brand is not yet customized to your intended major. What you need to do now is to start strategizing and focusing on high-impact activities related to your areas of interest.

Admission factors chart to determine your university admissions competitiveness level

Note:

Your current profile shows that you are borderline suited between Selective and Top State Level schools. You can still improve this status by improving your grades, activities, and awards. Also note that you have not taken any standardized tests yet and thus, your level of competitiveness is currently underestimated.

HOW TO POSITION YOU IN A UNIQUE MANNER FOR UNIVERSITY APPLICATION

“Personal Brand is one or two sentences that student would like the admissions committee to remember about.”

Your current personal brand is ‘Renaissance woman with a passion for entrepreneurship and community service’. This brand would make sense if you’re applying for Business, but since you are still undecided, think about what major you’d like to pursue, and what kind of brand would be best for an applicant in that field. Things to emphasize when developing your personal brand would be the WHY this academic interest, WHO you are in terms personality and non-academic passion, and WHAT is the cause that matters to you the most. In addition, you should also keep an open mind, be willing to get out of your comfort zone, and explore other fields in order to confirm your academic interest.

Your main focus within the next year is to gain exposure to the potential career paths in Computer Science, Business, Information Systems, as well as other fields that may be or your interest; work on personal projects related to these fields; and participate in activities that are relevant to your academic and personal interests to develop your niche and, thus, build a stronger personal brand.
